Fund Manager Comments

A restructuring of the Chinese economy continues to weigh on import demand and hence commodity prices, with global growth expectations being revised moderately lower during the second half to 3.3%. Positive growth impulses in the Euro area and Japan have offset the Chinese slowdown to some extent, while steady consumer demand and tightening jobs markets in the US and UK have driven their trade weighted currencies significantly higher. Relative weakness in emerging market capital flows has seen a decline in official foreign currency reserves over the period, although weaker currencies as well as pockets of structural reform have improved their global competitiveness on average, reflected by narrowing current account deficits in countries such as India and Indonesia. Overall, global monetary conditions remain loose, and significant capacity for government support in China should provide for a continued orderly transition towards a consumer-led economy, while the US Federal Reserve's monetary policy committee is expected to follow a relatively shallow hiking cycle over the medium term.

Global equity markets experienced a tough quarter as the market started to de-rate to more normal levels. Emerging markets came under significant pressure along with renewed weakness in commodity prices and devalued currencies. This quarter witnessed the return of risk aversion with the market becoming more cognisant of quality, especially in the credit markets where the spreads on high yield bonds spiked. This is likely to negatively impact on low quality companies as the availability of funding disappears and the cost of available funding soars. The result is that market leaders should continue to come out on top – the strong will get stronger. This bodes well for our portfolios as we have maintained our investment in high quality companies that have strong competitive advantages, and the ability to leverage off those competitive advantages to deliver a higher level of sustainable Return on Equity (ROE) through the economic cycle. We believe that companies which have healthy balance sheets and strong cash flows have the ability to sustain themselves during challenging economic environments while delivering real earnings growth over the long-term.

In global property markets the growth in demand for space continues to support higher occupancy and positive rental reversion. Due to the high levels of investor interest and liquidity, the capitalisation rates for property valuations are close to their peak levels and it is important for REITS to utilise the opportunity to recycle their properties and to be disciplined on acquisitions. In the current environment, stock selection is becoming increasingly important and REITS with stronger rental growth, enhancing developments and superior balance sheets are well positioned to outperform as bond yields normalise over the medium term. Based on the stable employment outlook for the US economy, the Federal Reserve is widely expected to begin hiking its key policy rate during the final quarter of 2015. However, by remaining sensitive to developments in macroeconomic conditions, including a rapid strengthening of the dollar, US policymakers have shown that they will be prudent in their actions, and will likely adapt to any unanticipated slowdown in the economy by pushing the tightening cycle further into the future. Long term yields have shifted decidedly off their lows over the prior two years, and are expected to continue on a medium term upward trend as monetary policy normalises.

Our balanced portfolio is well diversified across geographies, currencies, asset classes, sectors and instruments. This appropriate level of diversification allows for a relatively lower level of risk and is positioned to generate real returns for our clients over the long term.
