Fund Manager Comments

A restructuring of the Chinese economy continues to weigh on import demand and hence commodity prices, with global growth expectations being revised moderately lower during the second half to 3.1%. Positive growth impulses in the Euro area and Japan have offset the Chinese slowdown to some extent, while steady consumer demand and a tightening jobs markets in the US and UK have driven their trade weighted currencies significantly higher. Relative weakness in emerging market capital flows has seen a decline in official foreign currency reserves over the period, although weaker currencies as well as pockets of structural reform have improved their global competitiveness on average, reflected by narrowing current account deficits in countries such as India and Indonesia. Overall, global monetary conditions remain loose, and significant capacity for government support in China should provide for a continued orderly transition towards a consumer-led economy, while the US Federal Reserve's monetary policy committee is expected to follow a relatively shallow hiking cycle over the medium term.

Global equity markets have remained volatile over the past quarter as the US moves closer towards monetary policy normalisation. In light of this, instrument quality has become increasingly relevant as credit spreads have widened – particularly those of high yield bonds. The increasing cost of funding will negatively impact earnings and valuations of highly geared companies, thus making stock selection more important. Equity risk premiums remain elevated, supported by the low level of bond yields, which should continue to provide some support to equity market valuations. However, with global equity market valuations relatively in line with their long-term averages and volatility expected to remain elevated, we believe the market will continue to show greater distinction between high quality and low quality companies, emphasizing the importance of investing in companies with strong competitive advantages, healthy balance sheets and sustainable cash flows. This bodes well for our portfolios as we have maintained our investment in high quality market leading companies which have strong competitive advantages and the ability to generate sustainably higher cash flows and Return on Equity (ROE) through the economic cycle. The high quality companies in our portfolio have the ability to sustain themselves during challenging economic environments while delivering real earnings growth over the long-term. At the same time, despite the high quality, these companies are trading at a substantial discount to their intrinsic value and to the market.
